Epistemology as a compass

Maryvonne Charmillot [0009-0002-7390-6500]

Université de Genève, Faculté de psychologie et des sciences de l'éducation

1) The reasons for having chosen this journal to discuss what is presented in the article:

I chose the journal EOL because it is underpinned by an approach of ecology and plurality of knowledge and because it defends access to knowledge for all and pays particular attention to the souths.

2) The link between the article and the journal if any:

From the perspective of pluralistic knowledge and cognitive justice, the article proposes an alternative to positivism.

3) The contribution of the article:

Currently, social changes and crises (environmental, health, geopolitical) are challenging more and more researchers who question the principle of scientific neutrality and the subordination of science to capitalism. My contribution is a reflection based on the epistemology of the link developed by Florence Piron to think about epistemological alternatives that humanise the social sciences.

4) A positioning in relation to the alignment of the text:

I consider the notion of epistemological posture as a space for ethical reflection, necessary in any knowledge building process to recognise and reduce epistemic injustices.

5) The author's perspective (his/her values in relation to education and research at the time of submitting the article):

I seek to integrate the experiential knowledge of the actors into any educational or training work. Furthermore, the political dimension of research is, in my opinion, essential to avoid individualisation and injunctions to the responsibility of individuals, to the detriment of the responsibility and commitment of institutions and, more broadly, of States.

6) The author's choice of an appropriate CC license if different from CC BY SA:

7) The author's permission to publish this positionality together with the contribution:

Yes.